

Kiel, 29. October 2020

Bangor Daily News: Geoengineering could be our last chance to stop an Arctic thaw

"Very reluctantly, Hunt would now be willing to consider putting an aerosol (probably sulfur dioxide) into the stratosphere over the Arctic Ocean to reflect enough incoming sunlight to hold the local temperature down."

LINK

Linked to: aerosols , Solar Radiation Management , stratosphere

0 Comments

Add a comment

You need to be logged in to add comments.